

www.netsafe.org.nz

	Myspace summary	Facebook Summary	Bebo Summary
What is the minimum age?	14	13	13
What is on a members profile?	A member's profile can display a photo of themselves and personal information including: their first name, age, occupation, home city, school, interests and a blurb about themselves. It also has links to the member's friend's profiles.	A member's profile can display a photo of themselves and personal information including: their full name, age, home city, contact details, interests, school and university, and work details. It also has links to the member's friend's profiles.	A member's profile can display a photo of themselves, videos, songs, blogs, polls, quizzes and personal information including: their full name, age, home city, contact details, interests, school and university, and work details. It also has links to the member's friend's profiles, their msn contact, aim and skype. Comments from other members are visible on the profile.
Who can view a members profile?	Members under 16: Only friends can view the member's full profile – other members can view their partial profile (photo, age, gender and city). A member can change this setting to allow all members under 18 to view the full profile. All other members: Only friends can view the member's full profile but all members can view a member's partial profile. A member can change their profile setting to allow all other members, or all other	Members under 18: Only friends and other members under the age of 18 can view the member's full profile – other members can view their partial profile (photo, name and network). All other members: Friends and members in the same network (eg region, school) can view the member's full profile – other members can view a partial profile. By default, only friends can view the member's contact details. A member can change their profile setting to allow only	Members under 16: Only friends can view the members full profile - other members can view photo and name).  All other members: all members can view full profile. There are settings available to make the profile visible to only friends.

netsafe

www.netsafe.org.nz

	members over the age of 18, to view their full profile.	friends to view their full profile, or to allow members in their network to view their contact details.
Can someone browse or search for other members?	Members can search for other members by entering in search criteria such as sex, age, height, and country (note that members cannot enter an age under 18 in the fields). Members can also search for other members by name (note the results can include members under 16).	Members can browse members who are in the same network (eg Australia). Members can also search for members in the same network by entering in search criteria such as name, sex, and/or city; or they can search all networks by name. A member can change their settings to only allow friends to search for them.	Members can search for other members by entering in search criteria such as name, email address, profile name, friends of friends, key words, age- over 18, gender, relationship status and location. (note that members cannot enter an age under 18 in the fields).
Who can send a message to a member?	Any member can send a message to another member by clicking on the “send message” function on the other member’s profile. MySpace also has instant messaging for which there is three settings: anyone, only friends, or no one.	Any member can send a message to another member by clicking on the “send a message” function on the other member’s profile. A member can change their settings to not allow contact from a member who found them via a search and who cannot view their full profile.	Any member can send a message to another member by clicking on the “send message” function on the other member’s profile. A member can set a block to allow only friends to be able to send messages.

netsafe

www.netsafe.org.nz

How can someone join a member's list of friends?	Members under 16: Only members under the age of 18 can ask to join the young member's list of friends. All other members: Any member can ask to join another member's list of friends by clicking on the "add to friends" function on the other member's profile. If the other member approves, the two members will appear on each other's list of friends.	Any member can ask to join another member's list of friends by clicking on the "add to friends" function on the other member's profile. If the other member approves, the two members will appear on each other's list of friends.	Any member can ask to join another member's list of friends by clicking on the "add as friend" function on the other member's profile. If the other member approves, the two members will appear on each other's list of friends.
Can a member block another member?	Members can block another member from contacting them by clicking on the "block user" function on the other member's profile. They cannot block another member from viewing their profile.	Members can block another member from searching for them, from viewing their profile, and from contacting them.	Members can block another member from contacting them by clicking on the "block" function on the other member's profile.